

"CAPTAIN" MOSBY PROVES HE WASN'T SHOT IN MEXICO

Not Even Half-Shot, Declares Son of Famous Warrior.

"Captain" Jack Mosby, son of his father, draw-poker author and authority, lawyer, and well-known citizen, called at The Times office today to express confidence that he had not been killed in Lower California yesterday by the Diaz soldiers.

"I read with much interest," he said, "that I was shot yesterday. As a matter of fact I was not even half-shot. I had myself examined by my doctor this morning, and he is very sure I am still alive, though he adopted a properly tentative and professional tone which made me think he wanted me to come again and get an X-ray examination for conclusive confirmation. Unless I feel much deader during the afternoon, however, I shall not bother about it."

Son of Famous Warrior.

Jack Mosby is the son of John S. Mosby, famous cavalry leader under Lee. The San Diego dispatches said he had been leading a bunch of Mexican insurgents, and that the federals ambushed them and killed him.

"Only Mexican ambush that ever got me was made of pulque," said Captain Jack today. "If they would fight with pulque down their throats, instead of guns, they would have a much better country depopulated in three months."

Poker sharps all over the world know the poker stories which Jack Mosby has written for many years. "Old Man Greenhut" and the back room of the Arkansas City saloon, where the big games are played, are classics in poker literature.

Doesn't Like Bluffing.

Like all poker experts, he dislikes to be accused of bluffing unless the accuser pays the price necessary to see his hand. "It wasn't any bluff, it's about my being killed," he protested, when such a suggestion was advanced. "The facts are that there's a chap out in the Southwest who has been posing as a son of Colonel Mosby for several years. He is no relation to the family, and his performances have been mighty embarrassing to us."

Here "Captain" Jack's eye lighted up. "Do you know, I wouldn't be surprised if he's the chap that got killed. I sure hope it was he, instead of me."
